

The AST Psychosocial and Ethics Community of Practice (PSECOP) will be awarding two PSECOP ATC 2023 Travel Grants for reimbursable expenses up to $1,000 to attend ATC, including registration and travel expenses.

Qualifications

1. Current member of AST
2. Current member of the AST Psychosocial and Ethics COP
3. Presentation must have been submitted and accepted for presentation (poster or other platform) at the 2023 American Transplant Congress (ATC) meeting
4. Award applicant must be lead author of the project
 1. Research project must be broadly relevant to the field of psychosocial and/or ethics of transplantation.

Application Materials

- Application
- ATC abstract and ATC abstract acceptance letter
- Applicant CV or résumé

Judging of Presenter Grant

1. At least three (3) members of the Psychosocial and Ethics COP will review and score each submission based on the following criteria:
 - Quality of the presentation (1 to 5)
 - Impact of the presentation on current transplant practice (1 to 5)
 - Presentation significantly adds to the current body of literature on the given topic (1 to 5)
 - Presentation addresses an unmet need (1 to 5)

The Society remains committed to a diverse and inclusive culture. The membership is encouraged to consider nominations with an eye towards diversity in age, gender, ethnicity, and race, and other underrepresented minorities as defined by AAMC.

Grant recipients will be expected to present their research at ATC. Recipients will be expected to attend ATC 2023, the AST Townhall, and the PSECOP annual meeting.

The deadline for applications is March 15, 2023.

Please note that if you have already won an PSECOP grant in the past, you are not eligible. While you are permitted to apply for more than one COP ATC 2023 Travel Grant, you can only be awarded one grant. In the case that you are selected for more than one grant, the applicant will choose which to accept. Recipients of the ATC Young Investigator Travel Award are ineligible for this grant. Limit one submission per individual.

Please direct questions to Olivia Snow at osnow@myast.org.